ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

We wish to express our appreciation to the following individuals and organisations, without whose support this research would not be possible to accomplish.

Our appreciation goes to the business leaders who provided their valuable time in sharing their views and CSR practices, and for the in-depth discussions on the current situation and ways and means of improving CSR practice in Bangladesh. We were encouraged by the enthusiasm shown by the private sector and their willingness to meet with us and share their experience, often at very short notice. Without the support from these leaders, our study would not have been possible.

We would particularly like to thank Mr. Santos Datta Joint Secretary of the Bangladesh Employers Federation, who personally communicated with their listed companies and has briefed them about the research.

We would also like to thank the support given by factory workers who were open and willing to share their work experience in those respective companies.

We are also grateful to Diakonia who encouraged us to initiate this research work and supported us both financially and technically. We are thankful to Ms Khodeza Sultana Lopa, Mr. Md. Mazharul Islam and other staff at DIAKONIA who helped us to organize the research and were always available for discussion. Finally, we are acknowledging our gratitude to all who have supported in different stage of the research from planning to report writing.

This research has given us deeper insight into the Bangladeshi business environment and enabled us to gain valuable experience.

Thank you.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The aim of this research was to assess the effectiveness of Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) practices of some local and foreign companies operating in Bangladesh. The research specifically focused on the extent to which companies practicing CSR complied with basic legal labour standards involving their employees.

The research involved identification of companies providing CSR, obtaining information about the details of the CSR practices adopted at these companies (though looking at their website and interviews) and an assessment of how well these companies complied with basic labour standards.

The research found that most CSR practicing companies practiced CSR in their own specific way, and that few companies have separate units for providing CSR or get advice from CSR experts. It was often unclear how much money companies spend on CSR and it also found that many of these companies, whilst providing CSR, did not comply with the law in providing basic labour standards to their employees.
INTRODUCTION

The purpose of business is to make money. However, the profit motive is sometimes viewed as less than virtuous because it emphasizes self-interest. Nevertheless, self-interest is not the same as selfishness, which emphasizes one's own interests at others' expense. Self interest is simply a concern for financial reward and is arguably necessary if society is to be maximally productive and efficiently allocate its resources (Geoffrey P. 2002).

Profit rewards hard work and innovation, incentives that most people need because otherwise it would be irrational to save and invest rather than consume. Consequently business organizations cannot operate successfully without the cooperation of the society in which it is located. Businesses should assume social responsibilities because they are among the few private entities that have the resources to do so. The corporate world has some of the brightest minds in the world and it possesses tremendous financial resources (Ahamed 2010). Thus, businesses should utilize some of their human and financial capital in order to "make the world a better place."

Mohammad Sanaullah, Director, Corporate Affairs & Company Secretary of Singer Bangladesh said, 'Corporate Social Responsibility is one of the new dimensions in corporate management once if the focus was on financial Management. Most of that time people were saying that maximization of profit is the main objective of the company but in modern times we do not speak like that. We feel that the company's corporate management's main objective is to achieve the corporate goal and incentives as well. Whenever you have to achieve the corporate goal you think about the stakeholder's interest and at the same time the corporate social responsibility. Corporate Social Responsibility is for progressive companies and definitely they will look after the under privileged people, the distressed people and those who don't have the capacity to survive in this society'.

1.1 Bangladesh Economy

Bangladesh is a developing country, with per capita income of just about $1,300 US/year. Nevertheless, the economy is growing rapidly, with a 5-6% annual growth rate from 1996 to 2008 (BMZ, 2010). The economic growth has averaged roughly six percent since 2004. However, the economic development is one of the prime factors, which can resolve many of its current problems. The growth of businesses the market economies have created great opportunities for Bangladesh for further development. Economic development refers to changes that affect a local economy's capacity to create wealth for local residents (Kane & Sand 1988 seen Rahaman 2011).

From 1990 Bangladesh commenced a move towards a free market economy. A floating exchange rate mechanism was introduced from 2003. Yet the capital market in Bangladesh is underdeveloped. The market lacks appropriate laws, transparency and the corporate disclosure system is faulty. It provides little protection to minority share holders' rights and often action against listed companies is difficult.

Although the country is moving towards a free market economy neither government nor private initiatives have been sufficient to promote good corporate governance leading to an acceptable level of corporate social responsibility. As a member of the global economy, Bangladesh is also aware of the need to take positive initiative to establish an image of environmentally and socially responsible businesses.
CSR as a concept is being gradually interwoven into the psyche of local business, however, the process is slow and only in its infancy. The primary and most important benefit from implementing mechanisms such as a code of corporate governance is likely to be felt at the national level with an improved global perception of Bangladeshi business procedures including improved ethical business practices. In turn, this could lead to a process of revitalization of the Bangladeshi economy.

Many of the companies carrying out CSR activities are members of textile associations such as the Bangladesh Garment Manufacturers and Exporters Association (BGMEA) and the Bangladesh Knitwear Manufacturers and Exporters Association (BKMEA). Though the government has no explicit policy on CSR, Bangladesh Bank has made it mandatory for Banks to practice CSR, and some of the ministries, such as the Ministry of Commerce and the Ministry of Information, are encouraging private industry to engage in CSR activities, which are also tax deductible.

Companies also enjoy the support of two private institutions with CSR expertise: the Bangladesh Enterprise Institute (BEI) and the CSR Center Bangladesh. The BEI facilitates partnerships and programs in the private sector that are working to achieve Bangladesh's development goals, and it also organizes the local Global Compact network. According to the Bangladesh Enterprise Institute (2004) there are numerous potential benefits and rewards for Bangladesh by improving corporate governance, including corporate social responsibility practices. Moreover companies are not adequately implementing social and environmental standards and provides tools to help them improve their performance. It also serves as a network for the exchange of views and experiences. Both institutions provide a good contact point for companies seeking to become involved in CSR activities in Bangladesh (CSR WeltWeit 2012).

1.2 Research Aims
Safety and Rights are committed to promote safety and enforcing rights of the workers and distressed people of the country. Safety and Rights Society's principal objective is to ensure that the overall conditions faced by people at work are decent and are at very least in compliance with the law. Corporate social responsibility is a tool that is claimed to be able to provide benefits both to workers, over and above what they are entitled by law, and to the local community affected by the business.

1.3 The main objectives
The purpose of this qualitative exercise is to find out the extent and the kind of CSR practice by companies in Bangladesh and make recommendations for establishing a national framework to advance CSR in the country.

1.4 Justification for the study
There is an increase in the quest for social responsibility from the business sector because of its importance to the development of any country (Terungwa, 2011). Therefore, corporate social responsibility is not a threat to achievement of economic goals of a corporation; rather CSR is an opportunity and can be the basis of economic development of firms in terms of competitive advantage in global market (Belal, 2008). It is consequently needful for companies to be socially responsible so as to build their reputation, which may in turn affect their consumers' patronage.

This research can find the condition of CSR projects in the companies and give recommendation to the government to make a rule which will be mandatory by all profitable companies.
1.5 Methodology

The research on Corporate Social Responsibility was conducted over a seven months period between June and December 2012. The methodology used to conduct the study was a combination of qualitative and quantitative analysis based on face-to-face interviews using a semi structured questionnaire comprising 21 questions. This questionnaire included sections regarding company data, and dealt with a broad range of sustainability aspects such as charitable giving, CSR and human resource Management, drivers for CSR.

The participating companies were chosen from the group of larger national and multinational companies. Fifty companies from different sectors listed in the Dhaka Stock Exchange, was chosen as the sample for this study, to find out the extent of the use of corporate social responsibility activities by companies in Bangladesh. We randomly selected the companies from 12 sectors in business. Banks-5, Food & Allied-4, Engineering- 5, Pharmaceuticals & Chemicals-5, Services & Real Estate- 4, Tannery Industries- 5, Textile- 5, Telecommunication- 2, Fuel & Power- 5, Insurance- 5, and Fin Institutions- 5. An inquiry letter was sent to all the fifty companies to find out whether they have any CSR activities or not to select our fixed sample of twenty companies. Our targeted respondents were Managers of Corporate Communication Division for each company.

After we had established whom to contact, we wrote to them in the last week of July 2012 to obtain their assistance for our research. We mentioned three points; did they undertake any corporate social responsibility; why did they undertake those activities; and how the company and beneficiary were benefited from these activities. We asked them to respond by a particular date (14 August 2012). The companies which did not respond were contacted a number of subsequent times.

Apart from the semi-structured interviews we had also obtained information from the annual reports and the websites.

Very few companies had responded to our call and we wrote to BKMEA, BJPA, BTMA, BEF, BFLPEA, BFWE, BACI, BAPI, REHAB, BGMEA on 27 August 2012, to see if they could provide the name and address of at least 10 of their affiliated member organizations that have CSR related activities in Bangladesh. Only BEF (Bangladesh Employers Federation) responded to our letter and the joint secretary had personally communicated with their member companies and briefed them about the research. He played a vital role in selecting the companies to be interviewed in our research. Finally, we were able to select fifteen companies and obtained the information regarding the CSR activities of those companies.

In the mean time, we also interviewed the worker’s of that targeted companies. We wanted to discover whether or not the companies, whiles providing CSR, were also complying with the law on basic workplace standards.

1.6 Definition of Corporate Social Responsibility

"There is one and only one social responsibility of business-to use it resources and engage in activities designed to increase its profits so long as it stays within the rules of the game, which is to say, engages in open and free competition without deception or fraud" by Milton Friedman in 2012 Good reads Inc
There is no universally accepted definition of CSR. There are different types of views on what CSR is and what it is not. Having become a buzzword in boardrooms and the media, CSR is more often misunderstood as giving back to the society and considered to be synonymous with philanthropy. The dominant school of thought is that CSR is no philanthropic activity and a business must earn for what it invests. The company does it for its own long term good. Drawing a parallel with Publicity and Public Relations it is argued that philanthropy could earn publicity but CSR, like Public Relations is a long term investment with assured returns. It advocates that CSR constitutes a series of initiatives taken by a company in its enlightened self-interest.

It would be motivating to derive a meaning of the concept with the dissection of each of the words. CSR is not a difficult concept and can be explained as:

- Corporate - means organised business;
- Social - means everything dealing with people, the society at large;
- Responsibility - means accountability between the two.

Some people define CSR as meaning open and transparent business practices that are based on ethical values and respect for employees, communities and the environment. It is designed to deliver sustainable value to the society at large as well as to the shareholders. Now, there is no single, commonly accepted definition of CSR, even across global corporate bodies. It refers to business decision making linked to ethical values, compliance with legal requirements, and respect for people, communities and their environments. CSR is seen as more than a collection of discrete practices and occasional gestures or initiatives motivated by marketing, public relations or other business benefits. Rather, it is viewed as a comprehensive set of policies, practices and programmes that are integrated throughout business operations and decision-making processes.

Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) is a reality of recent decades. CSR is the continuing commitment of business to behave ethically and contribute to economic development while improving the quality of life of the workforce and their family as well as of the local community and society at large. Business owes its responsibilities towards society; first as a result of the impact of its own operations and secondly, as the unit of the society in which it operates. The former is related to what the organization does to the society by way of its specific operations, whereas the latter deals with what the society demands from it.

Accordingly, CSR needs to be:

(i) more inwards than outwards,
(ii) more related to the character and culture of the corporate rather than its size or profitability,
(iii) more related to making and distributing profits and sustainability,
(iv) more business process oriented than philanthropic,
(v) focused on day to day activities by every employee of the organization rather than limited to the typical presence of key individuals in the company along with the various social partners of the corporate. CSR appears in many forms some are directly related to employees and their families whereas some others point towards outside workplace without any connection to its employees. It takes various forms such as:

- Corporate Philanthropy
- Corporate Support
- Sponsorships
- Corporate Partnerships
- Responding in Emergency
CSR also refers to business decision making linked to ethical values, compliance with legal requirements and respect for people, communities and the environment. It is a comprehensive set of policies, practices and programmes that are integrated throughout business operations and decision-making processes that are supported and rewarded by the top management.

The World Business Council for Sustainable Development in its publication Making Good Business Sense by Lord Holme and Richard Watts, used the following definition for CSR. 'Corporate Social Responsibility is the continuing commitment by business to behave ethically and contribute to economic development while improving the quality of life of the workforce and their families as well as of the local community and society at large' (http://www.mallenbaker.net/csr/definition.php). For instance, CSR is a voluntary decision taken by corporations, it is integrated into the strategic model of business in the form a self regulating mechanism that lets them monitor and ensure their adherence to ethical standards, law and international norms.

Fundamentally, CSR is governed by the Triple Bottom Line (TBL) i.e. People, Planet, and Profit. By incorporating CSR policies, businesses embrace their responsibility towards the environment, consumers, employees, stakeholders, suppliers, communities and the other members of the community, and contribute to their social obligations by promoting and encouraging community development and eliminating the practices that harm it (admin 2011).

However, the scope of CSR in corporate board rooms to be management ranks have pervaded and continue to gain momentum (Hill, 2006 cited Belal 2008). It is also recognized as Corporate Responsibility, Corporate Citizenship, Responsible Business, or Social Action Program, Sustainable Responsible Business (SRB), Corporate Social Performance or Corporate Sustainability and Responsibility. It is gratifying more and more vital initiative of businesses both nationally and internationally. Proponents argue that corporations make more long term profits by operating with a perspective.

As per Wikipedia, "Ideally, CSR policy would function as a built-in, self-regulating mechanism whereby business would monitor and ensure its support to law, ethical standards, and international norms. Consequently, business would embrace responsibility for the impact of its activities on the environment, consumers, employees, communities, stakeholders and all other members of the public sphere. Furthermore, CSR-focused businesses would proactively promote the public interest by encouraging community growth and development, and voluntarily eliminating practices that harm the public sphere, regardless of legality."

It is to be remembered that a company's business model should be socially responsible and environmentally sustainable. By socially responsible, it means that the company's activities should benefit the society and by environmentally sustainable it means that the activities of the company should not harm the environment (Wikipedia, 2012). There are more responsibilities like economic, legal, and Ethical responsibility. The economic responsibilities lay the foundation of all social obligations and are deeply rooted in the classical doctrine of "business of business is business" as endorsed by noble laureate Milton Friedman (1970). Legal responsibilities are mandatory for corporations as these are prescribed by law. Therefore, corporations have no choice but to comply with these basic "ground rules" (Carrol, 1979, p. 50). Ethical responsibilities of corporations are additional responsibilities going beyond legal compliance and profit making and include those that firms believe are the right things to do. Ethical responsibility stems from humanistic, religious and moral orientation of corporations (Lantos, 2001). The discretionary responsibilities refer to the voluntary nature of obligations rooted in the altruistic principles that are neither required by law... nor are expected by the community. The drive for such responsibilities arises from the reciprocal obligation of giving back to community in exchange of profit and power that businesses receive from society (Ali Quazi et al http://www.kantakji.com/fiqh/Files/Companies/z120.pdf)

Though various definitions have been attached to the term, it can be stated that CSR, in its broadest sense, delineates the relationship between business and society and the role of business in sustainable development. The fundamental idea behind CSR is that a corporation or company incurs responsibilities to society beyond maximization of profit and beyond meeting the minimal requirement of the law. CSR also has numerous facets. Corporations are overwhelmed by many issues in the name of CSR: stakeholder demands, environmental issues, issues of sustainability, diversity, labour conditions, ethical investment, and philanthropy among others. Clearly, there is no one agreed concept. An important distinction should be made, however, between internal and external CSR practices.

Internal CSR refers to programmes that focus on the core business and on the workforce, such as:
- Human Resources (HR) practices
- Health, Safety and Environmental (HSE) practices
- Codes of Conduct
- Fulfilling and Motivating Work Environment
- Employee Development Programmes
- Local Content Policies
- Assessing and Increasing the Social and Environmental Impact of a Company
- Environmental Management Systems (EMS)
- Product Responsibility

External CSR refers to social and environmental programmes directed towards the external environment, including:
- Community development programmes
- Sponsorships corporate SOCIAL responsibility
- Donations
- Contributions to Civil Society Organizations (CCSO)
- Educational programmes at various levels
- Supply-chain management
- Cluster development
- Involvement in the development debate

External CSR should be also distinguished from philanthropy and Public Relations (pr)/Marketing. Unlike philanthropy, CSR is “an investment from which companies should expect tangible returns and positive impact on their net profits”. In contrast, philanthropy relates to “donations or charitable giving from which companies do not necessarily expect any direct positive impacts on their business activities”.

On the other hand, CSR differs from pr/Marketing, since it focuses on those areas where there is an overlapping of social and economic benefits, while pr/Marketing does not focus on any specific social benefits, but only on those activities that can provide a monetary return for the company.
In today's world, CSR can be defined as regards to all aspects of business behavior so that the impacts of these activities are incorporated in every corporate agenda (Orgrizek, 2001; Coldwell, 2001 cited in Belal 2008). So, with the literature's definition of CSR, it can be concluded that CSR is the continuing commitment taken by business organizations to strengthen their ethical concepts and social involvement in society, contribute to economic development, sponsor charitable programs, and improve the quality of the workforce and also the increment of services provided.

In the context of this research, we have looked at CSR as the benefits that companies provide to workers and to the local community affected by business, over and above what they are required to do so by law.

Critics: While critics argue that CSR distracts from the economic role of businesses. Others argue CSR is merely window-dressing, or an attempt to pre-empt the role of governments as a watchdog over powerful multinational corporations.

Despite the fact that CSR as a perspective is growing, there has always been critics (J Classon - 2006). One of the most influential critics is Nobel Prize winner in economy Milton Friedman, who claims that companies' sole purpose is to maximize profit for their stockholders. Furthermore, he claims that CSR is a waste of the stockholders' money (Friedman, 1962). He had argued that the primary responsibility of business is to make a profit for its owners, albeit while complying with the law. According to this view, the self-interested actions of millions of participants in free markets will, from a utilitarian perspective, lead to positive outcomes for society. If the operation of the free market cannot solve a social problem, it becomes the responsibility of government, not business, to address the issue.

The "competitive" argument recognizes the fact that addressing social issues comes at a cost to business. To the extent that businesses internalize the costs of socially responsible actions, they hurt their competitive position relative to other businesses. This argument is particularly relevant in a globally competitive environment if businesses in one country expend assets to address social issues, but those in another country do not. According to Carroll and Buchholtz, since CSR is increasingly becoming a global concern, the differences in societal expectations around the world can be expected to lessen in the coming years.

Finally, some argue that those in business are ill-equipped to address social problems. This "capability" argument suggests that business executives and managers are typically well trained in the ways of finance, marketing, and operations management, but not well versed in dealing with complex societal problems. Thus, they do not have the knowledge or skills needed to deal with social issues. This view suggests that corporate involvement in social issues may actually make the situation worse. Part of the capability argument also suggests that corporations can best serve societal interests by sticking to what they do best, which is providing quality goods and services and selling them at an affordable price to people who desire them.
2 LITERATURE REVIEW

There is in Bangladesh a long history of philanthropic activities from time immemorial. These philanthropic activities included donations to different charitable organizations, poor people and religious institutions (Miyan 2006). The CSR World Wide portal conclude that, in Bangladesh Civil society, businesspeople and politicians view CSR in terms of philanthropy, particularly in the schools and the healthcare sector. This focus is also rooted in the country's Islamic tradition of calling upon those with more resources to help the disadvantaged. Accordingly, companies are expected, most of all, to engage in charitable works, for example by providing donations or in-company training programs (The CSR World Wide portal, 2012).

Till now, most of the businesses in Bangladesh are family owned and first generation businesses. They are involved in community development work in the form of charity without having any definite policy regarding the expenses or any concrete motive regarding financial gains in many instances. Moreover, most of the SMEs fall under the informal sector having low management structure and resources to address the social and environmental issues.

The discussions on CSR practices in Bangladesh in its modern global terms, is relatively new. In general, it is true that in Bangladesh, the status of labor rights practices, environmental management and transparency in corporate governance is not satisfactory, largely due to poor enforcement of existing laws and inadequate pressure from civil society and interest groups like Consumer Forums. Globally, as CSR practices are gradually being integrated into international business practices and hence is becoming one of the determining factors for market accesses, it is becoming equally instrumental for local acceptability. A focus on CSR in Bangladesh would be useful, not only for improving corporate governance, labor rights, work place safety, fair treatment of workers, community development and environment management, but also for industrialization and ensuring global market access. By now, many CSR dimensions are practiced in Bangladesh (Miyan 2006, Mondol, 2009)

Though CSR is a relatively new concept in Bangladeshi corporate culture, awareness of corporate social reporting has rapidly increased. All companies need to consider their CSR for two basic reasons. Firstly, there is intensifying pressure from stakeholders to do so (Belal, 2001 cited Azim 2011). Any company that does not develop and promote its CSR policy to all stakeholders will face increasing threats to its reputation. Secondly, because it makes sound business sense, CSR enhances the reputation of an organization, brings in new business and improves stakeholder return (Kabir, 2003 cited Azim 2011).

The government of Bangladesh has not imposed or proposed requirements for disclosure of social and environmental performance. The Bangladesh Companies Act 1994 sets the general framework for corporate financial reporting. However, no provisions regarding CSR exist in the Companies Act 1994 (GoB, 1994). Until recently, there has not been a separate Bangladesh Accounting Standard (BAS) regarding social and environmental reporting (IASC, 2003). In Bangladesh, CSR is still voluntary with the exception of disclosure of expenditures on energy usage required under the Companies Act of 1994 and the Securities and Exchange Rules of 1987, which require the total amount spent on energy to be shown as a separate expenditure in the notes to the financial statements (Belal, 2001). Since corporate social reporting disclosure is voluntary in Bangladesh.
However some progressive companies disclosed some information on community, environmental and consumer related activities. Imam concludes that the sample listed companies tend to represent a relatively minor quantity of disclosure when compared with corporate financial disclosures. In the absence of independent verification, the credibility of information disclosed is questionable. Furthermore Hossain et al. (2006) investigated CSR by using the annual reports of 107 non-finance companies, for the financial year 2002-2003, showing that: an average 8.33% of Bangladeshi companies disclose social and environmental information in their corporate annual report. They concluded that the disclosure of social and environmental information made by the listed companies in their corporate annual reports in Bangladesh is “very disappointing” (Hossain et al., 2006 cited Azim 2011).

In recent years there is considerable pressure from various agencies for companies to act responsibly and be accountable for the impacts they have on social, political and ecological environments. Companies are also expected to participate in solving social problems, such as poverty and infrastructure (Kok, Wiele, McKenna & Brown, 2001 cited Azim Mohammed 2011).

Miyan was hopeful that a number of corporations are now following an increased commitment to CSR beyond just profit making and compliance with regulation. It also found that initiatives in CSR activities in Bangladesh are pioneered by Multinational Companies. Since Bangladesh is now exposed to global standards, it can be anticipated that the CSR activities in Bangladesh will continue to be extended. Firms are now trying to uphold their corporate image of socially responsible firms and consequently influence consumer buying decisions in favour of the goods and services marketed by them (Miyan M Alimullah September 2006 ).

Though it is explained that CSR is a set of practices that forms a part of good management or business practices much of it is about transparency and disclosure. Many organizations find that in actuality they already do much of what is considered "CSR" but often do not have formalized systems to report on those activities. Additionally CSR should not be viewed as an add-on activity as it is a concept of good practice that cuts across an organization (Belal 2008.). Zakir et al. disclosed that Bangladeshi firms should focus on CSR not only for improving corporate governance, labour rights, fair treatment of workers, community development and environment management, but also for industrialization and ensuring global market access. Ataur hopes that the government of Bangladesh is going to undertake an initiative to promote CSR practices. The objective would be to encourage the businesses to carry out the good citizen-like activities with the aim to reversing the perceived trend of businesses to have little commitment to society. (Ataur, 2008)

None of this research looked at the labour rights like workplace health and safety environment, employment standards, including general holidays, annual vacations, working hours, unjust dismissals, minimum wage, layoff procedures etc - issues that should be complied with by the company as well as CSR standards.
3 FINDINGS

3.1 Summary of Findings of the Research

This study examined the current practice of CSR and the extent to which these same companies complied with labour standards in Bangladesh. The analysis suggested that the investment of Bangladesh companies in social responsibility was not significant, particularly in light of their large annual profits. Also some of the CSR practicing companies did not follow the labour act properly in their organization.

The major areas in which CSR activities were undertaken are underprivileged child development, education, health, youth development/Sport, and Environment.

The Government does not have a CSR policy and there is no designated focal point for CSR within the Government. Only Bangladesh Bank plays a significant role in CSR promotion to the banking sectors.

The research findings are described below:

1. Most of the respondents stated that they completely understand the concept of corporate social responsibility though they didn’t follow any CSR guide line, policy or advice from any CSR consultation center of Bangladesh. Most of them simply do some philanthropic activity and declared that as CSR activity. Only Grameenphone and IDLC Finance consult with CSR Center and Nestle Bangladesh and BRAC Bank follow their parent organization’s guide line for their CSR activities.

4. Whilst, the CSR interventions of international companies are based on the direction and guidance of their parent companies (e.g., Nestle Bangladesh, Singer Bangladesh), other company's CSR programmes and projects are funded by the decisions on a board level or ad-hoc basis. The research revealed that seven companies out of twelve prepared their CSR plan following the decisions taken by the board.

5. CSR is also used by companies to provide benefits to their employees. Some of the companies engage in in-house charitable works, such as by providing donations or in-house training programs. Last year Apex Aadelchi (AAFL) donates money for training and skill development activities (annual report 2012) as well as regularly contributing to support education in schools, madrasas (religious school), knowledge centers, college and universities of the country. They have also set up a full-fledged medical centre and a day-care centre for their employees. Similarly SINGER set up a Sewing Academy which extends its services to the underprivileged women of the society. On an average each year, the Sewing Instructors provide training to approximately 2000 students who can also get a job in Singer. Babylon Group also arranged training and some sort of educational programme for their employees inviting renowned poets and writers to their factory to encourage their workers to be literate.

6. There were few companies who have separate units or department for CSR activities. The research found that Grameenphone, IDLC Finance, BRAC Bank and Nestle Bangladesh Ltd have a separate unit for CSR activities.

7. Trade unions: The CSR responsible person of every interviewed company stated that their employees were so satisfied that they did not feel a need to form a trade union. Though Beximco Group employees alone of the companies have a strong labour union and they are very active.
8. The primary target of CSR efforts for most businesses is underprivileged children of the society, mainly in the form of financial assistance towards medical treatment. IDLC sponsored 10 specially-challenged children of SEID Trust (SEID Trust- a non-governmental voluntary development organization working for social inclusion and promoting rights of underprivileged children with disabilities including intellectual and multiple disabilities as well as autism since 2003) and also sponsored Shishu Bikash Chhaya (a residential centre providing better education and healthcare facilities to underprivileged children) providing them the benefits of better education and healthcare facilities. IDLC has been contributing to SEID Trust for more than 6 years. Summit Power also sponsored an amount of Tk. 13,43,750/- to SEID Trust for supporting this deprived part of the community. Similarly Apex Tannery Ltd donated 0.5 million to Jalalabad Association for scholarships to the meritorious students. BRAC Bank donated Prothom Alo Adamy Medhabi, Biochemistry Olympiad. Beximco Pharma offered financial assistance to the children of their employees. In the year 2011, Singer also arranged Employment to the Underprivileged children of UCEP (Underprivileged Children's Education Program- is providing technical training on different trades. On completion of this training the trainees are absorbed in different organizations).

9. Companies have a preference to financially assist their employee's children's education purpose. In 2011, for example, Beximco Pharma offered assistance to a total of 36 meritorious students coming from diverse academic backgrounds. Similarly Titas Gas donated Employee's dependants who did well at secondary, higher secondary, graduation and post graduation level were granted scholarships under "Titas Gas Education Scholarship & Financial Assistance Programme". In 1987, "Titas Gas Adarsha Uchcha Biddyaloya" was established at the premises of Titas Gas Office at Demra, Dhaka.

10. Companies are interested to donate in Art, Cultural and Sports sector: For instance SINGER Bangladesh Limited in association with media partner Channel i, has introduced SINGER-CHANNEL I BRAVERY AWARD: KINGBODONTI, first of its kind in the country, from 2011. The objective of this award is to recognize and honor brave souls of the country who are making a difference through their selfless acts. Similarly, In 2011 Beximco, sponsored and organized the grand cultural event, at the National Museum, marking the 150th birth anniversary of Rabindranath Tagore. Summit believes in the eagerness, strength and compassion amongst the youth and aims to boost up the spirit within the Bangladeshi youth and so supports and sponsor North Alpine Club Bangladesh - NACB.

11. Some companies are environmentally conscious and take initiative, such as IDLC finance has launched an environmental awareness campaign in different school, in partnership with LEADS, targeting primary school children. On environmental issues, Summit Power gives high priority to protecting the environment and their humble efforts in this regard included extensive number of sapling plantation in the Company's power plants and neighboring places.3

3Beximco Pharma states that it is always aware of environmental compliance and adopts policies to preserve the environment by practically minimizing emission and waste, thereby reducing carbon footprint. But the authorities of Hajji Kasimuddin Public School at Tongi's Ouchpara, adjacent to a factory of drug maker Beximco Pharmaceuticals, have filed a general diary with Tongi Model Police as several students fell sick on 9 September 2012, Sunday after inhaling gas emitted from the factory (http://news.priyo.com/business/2012/09/09/schoolers-fall-ill-b-59396.html). Business organizations cannot operate successfully without the cooperation of the society in which it is located.
12. The links between NGOs and business sector are limited. Few of the interviewed companies had links with NGO’s for their CSR activities. Beximco does works together with non-profit organizations who work to improve people’s lives through research, information, and advocacy. Beximco joined Mobile Alliance for Maternal Action (MAMA) in Bangladesh. MAMA is a country-owned, country-led initiative managed by an alliance of stakeholders. Summit Power understands its responsibility to reduce the gender inequality and continues to support related bodies through different means, with Karmojibi Nari (KN) one such organization. Summit Power Limited donated to the Acid Survivor’s Foundation that supports survivors of brutal attacks. Similarly Apex Adelchi Footwear Ltd. (AAFL) has played an instrumental role in establishing the Center of Excellence for Leather Skill Bangladesh Limited (COEL) to give one-stop skill solutions for leather sector. AAFL is one of the major stakeholder of COEL, a not for profit institution, which has coordinated its effort with the Department for international Development’s (DFID) Shiree challenge Fund and Gana Unnayan Kendra to identify groups most affected by climate change. Similarly, Singer Bangladesh had taken up an ongoing initiative in conjunction with Fareea Lara Foundation. Grameenphone jointly with USAID launched Mobile Alliance for Maternal action (M4H) initiative that provides critical life saving information to new and pregnant mother and their guardians through SMS and IVR. Grameenphone also collaborates with Jaago Foundation launched Online Class room and support for Women Support and investigation Division and national Legal Aid Services Organization (NLASO).

13. None of the interviewed company said they faced any type of impediment or hurdles in implementing CSR activities.

4 RECOMMENDATIONS

Create a CSR policy: It would be helpful if the government created a CSR policy setting out expectations that the government has of companies to work on CSR issues, and providing guidance on the kinds of activities possible.

Awareness building Programme: It would be useful if there was a greater awareness amongst businesses about corporate social responsibility and the kinds of CSR activities they could undertake.

Worker’s Rights ensured: Those undertaking CSR must ensure that they are complying with the law in relation to labour rights and any legal obligations they may have in protecting the local community and environment.

Capacity building: Companies should consider seeking assistance from outside bodies in considering what CSR activities they should or could undertake.

- Research and information sharing on CSR: Research into CSR achievements amongst Bangladesh companies
- Corporate CSR strategy: Companies should be encouraged to integrate CSR into their core values and articulate a specific CSR strategy. They should not wait for government pressure, they should boldly practice CSR activity for their sustainable business.
- Stakeholder engagement: In originating the CSR strategy companies should identify those with a stake in the activities undertaken and develop a policy for communicating with them.
- Performance management and governance: Evaluation measures are an integral part of the CSR strategy. When companies formulate their CSR strategies it should clearly state the indicators of performance, and in the course of strategy implementation performance shall be monitored to ensure that the CSR goals are being achieved. There should be a separate unit or department and at least a designated senior person within the company, who ensures governance in CSR implementation.

Public disclosure: Business should aim to disclose their CSR engagement to the public. Transparent reporting will improve the companies’ credibility; it will open up opportunities for coordination of CSR initiatives across businesses, and facilitate better research and inter-stakeholder dialogue resulting in general improvement of CSR.

CSR practicing Companies should disclose information about the exact percentage of their profits goes into CSR activities, in their Annual Report. This voluntary disclosure has a positive impact on how an organization performs and may legitimize the organization’s behavior by influencing other stakeholders. It also signifies the recognition of that organization’s accountability to society.

- Higher education institutions involved in business administration should ensure that they have a module in the courses dealing with CSR activities.

CSR definition: What we understand by CSR that CSR activities can be the cause behind better performance and can also produce more revenue and growth. Companies that are socially responsible usually generate satisfactory financial returns. Some internal areas of business that are influenced by CSR are: human resources management, health and safety during work, adjustment to changes and management of environmental impact and natural resources. The external areas include local communities, business, partners, suppliers and consumers, human rights and global environmental issues.

CSR activities: Apex Adelchi Footwear Limited (AAFL) has played an instrumental role in establishing the Centre of Excellence for Leather Skill Bangladesh Limited (COEL) to give one stop skill solutions for leather sector. AAFL is one of the major stakeholders of the COEL, a not for profit institute, which has coordinated its efforts with the Department for International Development’s (DFID) Shiree Challenge Fund and Gana Unnayan Kendra (GUK) to identify groups worstly affected by climate change. The Company has been providing its expertise and all out support to equip the trainees to meet the rising demands of the industry. Concurrently, empowerment and employment of such communities directly correlates with the first Millennium Development Goal of the United Nations for eradicating extreme poverty and hunger through the empowerment of marginalized workers. It has brought the extreme poverty ridden individuals (70% of who are women) from Gaibandha district of Rangpur region affected by Climate Change. In fact in 2011 alone, AAFL has trained and employed over 1,000 such individuals in its factories. Through this sustainable employment initiative, these workers have the opportunity to obtain greater job security, steady income and better living standards. In addition, during their training period, each individual is getting monthly stipend, providing them with a unique opportunity to earn while learning. The Company’s inclusive business model not only seeks to create employment and empowerment of the most vulnerable communities in the country, but also serve as an example of an environmentally responsible and sustainable business model in the industry.

AAFL ensures the health and welfare of its employees through a full-fledged medical centre and a day-care centre. The accreditation from Business Social Compliance Initiative (BSCI) serves as a vindication of these practices.
AAFL is a regular contributor to support education in schools and madrasas, knowledge centers, college and universities of the country.

Training & Skills Development Activities : Started training using the factory premises of Apex Adelchi Footwear Limited with the help of Poverty Reduction by Increasing the Competitiveness of Enterprises (PRICE), which is funded by the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) to train 400 individuals every three months time, resulting in a total of 2400 operators trained in one and half years to create employment opportunities in footwear and leather goods sectors.

Nestlé does not publish financial report to the public.

CSR definition: Mirza Golum Hossain, Senior Manager, Corporate Affairs and Communication defines CSR as, ‘Nestlé’s own style of CSR-to create value for shareholders and society simultaneously, in a manner that is integrally linked to their core business strategies and operations,’ For a company to be successful in the long term and create value for its shareholders, it must also create value for society. Creating Shared Value(CSV) encourages businesses to create economic and social value simultaneously by focusing on the social issues that they are uniquely capable of addressing. CSV builds on a strong base of performance in environmental sustainability and compliance, as illustrated in the CSV Pyramid above. In addition, we recognise the vital role of our people and the importance of engaging and collaborating with other organisations’.

CSR activities: In 2006, Nestlé became the first organisation to adopt CSV approach, but their history of working together with society stems back to our roots. For maximum impact, Nestlé has focused its Creating Shared Value efforts and investments on three areas - Nutrition, Water and Rural development. Nestlé always focused on long term, sustainable and profitable growth and helped communities around its operation to improve its quality of life in a similar manner. That is why Nestlé says ?Creating Shared Value? rather than corporate social responsibility. In the process of delivering shared value the company first of all puts emphasis on the compliance, where they remain compliant to the local and international law then it focuses on it’s sustainably as a business organization and finally contributes for creating shaded value.

Nestlé is currently working to secure safe drinking water, provide education and training to develop skilled manpower. In a country like Bangladesh, Nestlé is arranging the safe drinking water, where the sources of the pure drinking water are rare; currently this program is organized for the factory workers and their family members in Sreepur. This particular initiative is also active in India and other countries.
Nestlé supports initiatives to create awareness about the right to education and encourages the communities around its factories to send their children to school. That is why the company already builds up several schools for the workers' children of the factory. Moreover Nestlé Bangladesh from 2009 started to distribute laptops among the school going children to make chance for the students to get modern education, already 49 schools have been covered under this initiative. On the other hand Nestlé India employees have developed a special play 'Let Us Go to School' for this purpose. This has been staged amongst the communities around the factories, and its recordings screened at smaller gatherings even in Bangladesh. "Much of our CSR initiatives in the country centers around proper sanitation and access to clean drinking water, two areas which could be identified as the quite essential prerequisites for leading a healthy life" Giving access to computer technology- a basic educational requirement of these days, to rural school students is another area on which Nestle CSR initiatives are based on.

In line with that, the company has also donated computers to a total of 49 schools in rural areas for use in the school laboratories, the authority said."The nature of our CSR activities is such that the initiated projects go through extensive subsequent monitoring on our behalf and things such as proper maintenance are assured"

Labour act comply: Nestlé is providing enough space to its employees to take an active part in the life of the community or by assuming responsibilities in professional, civic, cultural, religious or voluntary organizations. Nestlé believes that any activity during working hours has to be first approved by the company. Nestlé Bangladesh maintain a stable compensation structure in compare to the other corporate of Bangladesh. Compensation in the different levels of the employment always remains equal to or above the market benchmark. Compensation practice takes relevant external compensation levels as well as the requirement of internal fairness.

12. Food and Allied Sector: Gemini Sea Food Limited

Company Profile: Gemini Sea Food Ltd., a leading shrimp processing factory, came into being in the year 1982. Since their inception they have produced, processed, packed and exported the highest quality traditional block frozen shrimps. Gemini Sea Food Limited is a sister concern of Gemcon Group. Gemcon’s journey began with the formation of Castle Construction in 1979 by its founder Kazi Shahid Ahmed. The factory of Gemini group is established in Jabusha, Rupsha, Khulna-9241, Bangladesh. Phone: +880-41-80015, 800415, 800416 Fax: +880-41-800361.

CSR definition: Chief Operating Officer Mr. M. Mustaque Amin defines CSR, ‘We actually believe that if our work does not harm to the local people and if we contribute something good for our society that is CSR in our vision. It is true that if a company honestly does something for the society automatically its image will increase. We believe that caring for our social environment is as important as looking after our natural environment. Through our extensive social projects, we support our workers and reach out to our neighbors.'
CSR activity : Actually we do not practice CSR separately. But as a group we donate a lot when it needed. We did it in two ways, one is organized way. We are a sister concern of a nonprofit organization that is Kaji Foundation (KSF), all our group entity funded in KSF. Another way of contribution is adhoc bases. But it is a show of culture that if a company contributes something for social development they eagerly waited for publicity, but our company never thinks like that.

Poverty alleviation through cattle rearing & social projects. Via our cooperative we encourage villagers to rear organic cattle. Our interest-free loans, in the form of cows, are paid back in long-term installments through the selling of milk, cow dung and calves. In this way, local farmers can rapidly become self-reliant and self-sufficient entrepreneurs.

This cooperative is supported in Bangladesh by the KK Tea brand, and abroad by the Teatulia brand of teas. We support and encourage young boys and girls in outdoor sports. Sports equipment such as footballs, volleyballs, cricket bats, and caram boards are distributed free of cost to primary and secondary schools, and local clubs at our farm. Hygienic latrines are a basic prerequisite for sanitation. So from the very beginning of our tea plantation we have distributed safe latrines amongst our workers and poor villagers around our area.

These latrines are distributed free of cost and all technical support is provided by our experienced personnel. Latrine distribution has been one of the most successful ways to quickly and simply improve the health conditions of the area.

Is a sister concern of Kazi & Kazi Tea Estate Ltd. Children of workers can live better lives, Female worker learning how to read & write, Local kids learning computers in IT Center.
